Don't miss an opportunity to put these valuable tools in your kit. Understanding economic change is no longer an academic exercise, it is our livelihood and our future. This exciting mix of national and local speakers will offer important techniques for jump-starting economic growth. The program is highlighted with a couple of fun surprises. But hurry, tickets are limited.

The Speakers

 Ron Crouch is the Director of the of the Kentucky Data Center located at the University of Louisville. This national speaker analyzes the data of a region to develop information in ways that enhance understanding and utilization. He will discuss data and trends of the counties of seminar participants.

 Dr. Bruce Domazlicky is the Director of the Center for Economic and Business Research on the campus of Southeast Missouri State University. He and Dr. Diane Primont, the Center's Assistant Director, are professors of Economics and they will discuss using regional clustering as an economic development tool. They will highlight Scott and surrounding counties.

 Dennis Roedemeier is the CEO of Missouri Research Corporation. His vast experience in practical economic development is the basis for discussing how communities and regions can utilize the power of a university to help jump-start economic growth.
